Mackinac Island, Michigan

Established in 17th century by Native Americans, this small island (measuring less than 4 square miles), has established itself as a top rated summer tourist destination in the US.

One of the most notable distinctions of Mackinac Island is that motor vehicles have been prohibited on the island since 1898, giving the island a truly historical character. The primary methods of transportation on the island are bicycles, horse-drawn carriage, walking, and hiking.
